Known as the home of the Star-Spangled Banner, the national anthem of the United States, and nicknamed "Charm City", Baltimore is a colorful and thriving place, often called "the city of neighborhoods." As the largest municipality in the state of Maryland, Baltimore boasts a beautiful natural harbor that contributed to its role as an important shipping and manufacturing center and continues to be a major industrial, trade and tourist hub. The city's largest diasporas hail from Mexico, El Salvador and the Caribbean with sizable populations from Nigeria, China and Korea. Photo: DenisTangneyJr/ E+/ Getty Images

VOA CHARTER

President Gerald Ford signed the VOA Charter into law in 1976. It protects the independence and integrity of VOA programming.

- 1. VOA will serve as a consistently reliable and authoritative source of news. VOA news will be accurate, objective, and comprehensive.
- 2. VOA will represent America, not any single segment of American society, and will therefore present a balanced and comprehensive projection of significant American thought and institutions.
- 3. VOA will present the policies of the United States clearly and effectively, and will also present responsible discussions and opinion on these policies.

Dear Friends,

This year the VOA calendar offers you a coast-to-coast tour of some of the most striking American city skylines. Along with a list of major sights for each featured city, we mention some of the largest diaspora communities in each metropolitan area. The diversity in our cities is about the same as at VOA with the programming we offer in 47 languages. As our charter requires, VOA strives to tell America's story to our international audiences – which means covering the entire American experience and not just one segment or region of the country.

New in 2019 was VOA's updated logo and tagline: "A Free Press Matters." More than just words, this message is at the heart of who we are in many parts of the world. We recognize that VOA isn't just the only unbiased news outlet available in certain regions, we also represent the very idea that a free press can exist. Now our logo includes that commitment front and center.

Diversity in our coverage and in our newsrooms is also a core belief at VOA. Recognizing the underrepresentation of women in global media, we are making a serious effort to change that reality across our entire organization. Our audiences and our workforce are already noticing this positive change in our coverage, as well as in the faces in front of and behind the VOA cameras and microphones.

Since 1942, VOA's primary mission has been to provide truthful news and information for those with little or no access to a free press. With that in mind, we are expanding our programming for refugees and migrants, some of the most underserved populations in the world. As the number of refugees and displaced persons continues to grow globally, VOA broadcasts will reach them where they are and in their languages with comprehensive coverage of current events and critical issues important to them.

Wishing you all a happy, healthy, and productive 2021!

Sincerely,

VOA Staff

Minneapolis and nearby state capital St. Paul make up the “Twin Cities.” Located in Minnesota, the city is surrounded by freshwater lakes and rivers contributing to its role as an economic and cultural center in the northern United States. Due to its harsh winter climate, they have developed the largest pedestrian skywalk system in the world, made up of 11 miles of enclosed pedestrian footbridges that connect city buildings. Minneapolis is a popular location for immigrants from Scandinavia, Southeast Asia, and the Horn of Africa, including the largest Somali diaspora community in the U.S.

Houston is considered one of the most ethnically and culturally diverse cities in the United States. In addition to having the third-largest Hispanic population in the country, Texas' largest city is home to many Asian, specifically Vietnamese and Chinese, and African immigrants. Ranked number one in total park acreage among major U.S. cities, Houston contains hundreds of acres of green space and miles of bike trails amidst its gleaming skyscrapers. The city has a world-famous Museum District, the nation's astronaut training center and dozens of renowned educational and medical centers.

With nicknames like “The Windy City”, “The City of Big Shoulders” and “The Second City”, Chicago is the third-largest city in the country. A major transportation and industrial center, Chicago is home to the country’s first skyscraper and the second tallest skyscraper in the Western Hemisphere today, the Willis Tower. Chicago has a long history of immigration starting with the many European immigrants who arrived in the 1800s. Today the largest diaspora populations in Chicago are Serbian, Irish, Polish, German, Italian and Chinese. Chicago’s many ethnic neighborhoods reflect the huge diversity in its population.

Nicknamed the “Steel City,” Pittsburgh was the center of the American steel industry and the industrial trade through most of the 1900s. When many of the manufacturing factories closed in the 1980s, the city transformed itself into a global innovation hub with a focus on education, medical, and technology innovation. Pittsburgh is connected by more than 400 bridges across the city’s three rivers — the Monongahela, Allegheny, and Ohio — and surrounded by miles of bike and walking trails. Pittsburgh is home to many Central and Eastern European immigrants, including the largest Croatian population in the nation and the fifth-largest Ukrainian population.
